Customer Reviews

Jason and Brittany are former lovers who by chance happen upon each other again. They are supposed to be each other's soul mate, but Jason was a habitual cheater who broke poor Brittany and turned her into a cold hearted woman who refuses to have a relationship with any man. In fact when Jason comes back into her life six years later he finds that she has seven men she keeps on call to service her sexual needs, but none of them have been allowed to breach her heart. In fact they all know about each other and are lucky to get an hour of Brittany's time in any given week. Jason on the other hand is a man of deceit and lies. In fact he earned his riches by developing an app that helps people who have multiple relationships to track their partners and keep whatever lies they tell straight. Jason's app allows him to keep his harem of 48 women around the world at bay and he knows where they all are at any given moment. Each of his women thinks that she is the only one because he just can't bear to hurt them. In my opinion this is where the book goes wrong. From the beginning of the book Jason tells the reader how he loves playing the field and he would never settle down with just one woman. He is the ultimate player and even chose his lifestyle as inspiration for his claim to fame. The reader is suddenly flipped on their head when Jason runs into Brittany his high school lover. All of a sudden he is head over heels in love and has declared himself a one woman man. Within minutes of their reunion he wants a totally unbelievable monogamous relationship with Brittany, his one true love. In the same night he wants to marry her and after one passionate round of unprotected sex, he is fine with the possibility of her having his baby. What? This was a shock to the system and made no sense.
