Poetry: Wings of Emotion by Author Euphonus Ausl am very impressed by this poet's talent. This compilation of deep and thought provoking poems is sure to stir a few heartstrings. As with all poetry, some poems hit closer to home than others because of the reader's personal frame of reference. The ones describing a variety of dreams are very enjoyable, however... the poem "Feelings" is of particular interest to me. It describes the tender feelings that falling in love involve. It depicts what true love is all about...that it really is all that it is "cracked up" to be but the poem also realistically presents that even true love has its challenges. An argument with a "dear one" can and will make a relationship stronger providing the lovers do not let it get in the way of the learning experience. A heart-felt hug is a perfect remedy to turn away the troubles that are inevitable in all loving encounters. The next few poems on love definitely reach out to me. I know I am such a romantic that it would be impossible for me to not be affected by the depth of the love demonstrated by talented poet Euphonus Aus. Many other emotions are investigated in this vast array of poetry touching base on grief, fear, the absence of a loved one, pain of separation, and the excruciating pain of losing a loved one. At last, the memories surface of the good times spent together...moments of hope...a special place in the heart wrapped in a deep and abiding love that will never be forgotten. Will the rain ever be able to wash away the tears? Emotions...all of them expressed so vividly. They can set you free as each one is explored and felt so deeply. They then take flight on the wings of love. I especially enjoyed the final poem in this lovely book of poetry "My Granny"...
