I started reading this aloud to my daughter the day I brought her home from the hospital. Earlier this week, I finished it, just short of her 19 month birthday. Despite the long time coming, this is a lovely translation of a classic work. The translator, Isabel Gortazar, has created rhyming verses to mirror their English ancestors, such as the following (after Pooh finds Eeyore's tail): El rabo se perdiÃ³, Fue Puh quien lo encontrÃ³. A la hora de almorzar Puh lo saliÃ³ a buscar. I mostly fell in love with this translation when Pooh and the gang were en route to the North Pole, and Eeyore says, "Por mÃ¡s, podemos ir a descubrir el Polo Norte o dedicarnos a jugar a policÃas y ladrones. Me da exactamente igual." This line made me laugh, and I went and looked it up in the original English: "We can look for the North Pole or we can play 'Here we go gathering Nuts and May' with the end part of an ant's nest. It's all the same to me." I laughed again! Thank you, Ms. Gortazar. Eeyore really does get all the best lines. Towards the end of the book, at Pooh's party, Eeyore says, "Después de todo, no sé de qué me quejo. Tengo amigos. Ayer mismo alguien me dirigió la palabra. Y no hace ni una semana que Conejo chocó conmigo y dijo, '¡Canastos!' Una intensa vida social." This is a beautiful piece of translation. I only wish Ms. Gortazar had translated more of A.A. Milne's work!

It is an outstanding translation to Spanish. My children enjoy listening to what Porcuete, Liyoo and Puh have to say.

My daughter loves this book! She is English/Spanish bilingual and laughs every time we have read it together. Isabel Gortazar did a great job with the translation.

This was purchased to be read aloud at a children's home (orphanage) in Honduras. These children don't often have 'story-time' and so it was somewhat magical!! Recommended for sure!
